National Arab American Heritage Month

INSIDE EMORY UNIVERSITY

National Arab American Heritage Month (NAAHM) is a time for celebrating the heritage, histories, and values of the diverse population of Arab Americans. In 2021, Rep. Dan Kildee (D-MI) and Rep. Rashida Tlaib (D-MI) introduced a resolution to the House of Representatives honoring the contributions of the 3.7 million members of my community in the United States. In medicine, law, engineering, technology, and the arts, the Arab American community has been at the forefront in building our country without losing our rich culture.

"[Recognizing] the contributions of the 3.7 million members of my community in the United States. In medicine, law, engineering, technology, and the arts, the Arab American community has been at the forefront in building our country without losing our rich culture." - Congresswoman Rashida Tlaib, Rep. of Michigan
